CHOREOGRAPHED CREATIONS

Anderson Studio of Architecture and Design delivers bespoke, elevated experiences.

"A home experience begins long before you reach the curb cut," says Scott Anderson, founding director of architecture at Anderson Studio of Architecture and Design. "It's about creating a narrative and choreographing the entire experience."

From those first feelings upon the initial approach to the interplay of landscape design, transitions from exterior to interior spaces, and the textures and layers within each space, every experience is connected. Every detail is thoughtfully predestined.

At Anderson Studio of Architecture and Design, a team of professionals plays an integral role in the design process and is vetted to perform at the highest levels of artistry and collaboration. Regardless of the scope of a project, nothing is diluted. The team's absolute best is brought to every project, every day.

By providing a unique, custom experience, clients are the most significant element in every project. Through a thorough discovery process over several months, clients' voices are heard and valued, bringing depth to the design vision to deliver something beyond what they thought possible. "It's very rewarding to form true, genuine relationships with our clients and ensure they feel cared for and heard. They invest their trust in us," says Kelly Ferguson, director of marketing and client engagement.

The team thrives on accepting projects often perceived as too intimidating for other firms. "When others' solution is to eliminate the problem, we use those challenges to our advantage to design a home and experience that feels effortless," Anderson says.
